

Raise Arms

Ask participants to use their arms to signal priority:

- Arms down – low priority
- Arms half way up – medium priority
- Arms all the way up – high priority

The facilitator scans the audience and marks by the item the priority (high, medium high, medium, medium low, low) and moves to the next item.

If disagreement is anticipated, ask for reasons something should be considered high or low priority before the exercise.

If large disagreement is seen – solicit reasons for the evaluation so the group can rethink. Then raise arms again.
